Technology Literacy

Student Name Date

Design Architecture for Web Site on the United Nations

Here is our screen layout and architecture flowchart for our Web site on the viability of the United Nations. We will use these charts as the basis for the development of our web site.

Screen Layout

Title Area or Masthead Include picture related to content
Navigation Area Table of Contents List out the different pages on the Web site and provide links to each one.	Content Area Provide the different content for the Introduction, conclusion and different areas of content listed in the table of contents.
Footer Area Footer information and credits

Site Architecture and Site Map (on page 2)

Site Architecture

Index Page

Content: Introduction to the topic, Is the United Nations Still Relevant?

Multimedia: No graphics or video for this

Links: This page links to all other pages

on the site.

The Children of the Middle East

Content: Information on the UN mission to the Middle East.

Multimedia: Picture of children in refugee camp.

Links: This page links to all other pages

on the site.

Machu Picchu and the Environment

Content: Information on UN initiative to save heritage site.

Multimedia: Picture of Machu Picchu Links: This page links to all other pages

on the site.

Darfur, Sudan Conflict

Content: Information about UN work to end the genocide in Darfur, Sudan. Multimedia: Picture of protestors on the Darfur issue; video clip on UN minisummit on Darfur.

Links: This page links to all other pages

on the site.

Conclusion

Content: Final remarks on the viability of the United Nations in today's world. Multimedia: No graphics or vide for this

Links: This page links to all other pages

on the site.

Web Site Map

