Dear Server Blades Customer:

Intel is announcing the discontinuance of the SBX44 blade server as well as accessories and spares related to that blade. In addition, while it isn't a separately sold item, we are announcing the end of life of the Intel Deployment Manager software deployment product.

RoHS, lead-free legislation, or to use its accurate but rather lengthy name "Directive 2002/95/EC on the restriction of the use of certain hazardous substances in electrical and electronic equipment", is causing ripples throughout the computer industry. Component suppliers are discontinuing older parts that are not RoHS compliant. Intel has no plans to make the SBX44 blade RoHS compliant. Therefore many of the components used to build this blade are being discontinued. The result is that we are forced to make a somewhat accelerated call for last orders on this product.

Also there are numerous components that support the SBX44 blade. This notice also includes those related and supporting components.

Also included in this announcement is the end of life of the Intel Deployment Manager (IDM) product. IDM is currently distributed with every SBCE chassis sold. In the coming months there will be changes made to the management module in the SBCE chassis that will render inoperative some of the functions of IDM. Intel recently launched Intel System Management Software 1.0 (ISMS) which provides basic server management and a foundation for optional upgrades that include software deployment features. The combined capabilities of ISMS and the associated deployment upgrade serve as the replacement for IDM. By the beginning of Q2'06 IDM will no longer be included with the SBCE chassis and ISMS will be made available to replace it.
